Cedar Home (Lebanon)

The Lebanese national power supply is essentially non-existent. Like the rest of the country, Cedar Home has transitioned to operating on generator power. Not only does it cost approximately $2,000 every month to keep the lights on, but the reliance on gas adds to air pollution and leaves the home vulnerable to gas prices and supply shortages. Power is a crucial part of the ministry at the home, not only for powering appliances, lights, technology, and other electrical equipment, but also for the building's security and safety systems.

Lebanon enjoys 11 months of sunshine every year, making it a perfect place for solar power projects. The Cedar Home campus also has ample unobstructed rooftop space which would enable solar panels to absorb light from 6:00am to 7:00pm each day.

Funds raised through FAIR's Journey With a Child special appeal will go towards the purchase and installation of solar panels at the Cedar Home campus. This investment in the building will help save over $24,000 a year and create a sustainable power source not dependent on external resources, making life for the girls and staff easier and more predictable.

You can invest in the stability and security of life at Cedar Home by making a donation to Journey With a Child today.

We encourage you to consider becoming a sponsor at $35/ month ($420 annually) to ensure the children and youth at Cedar Home continue to have access to the holistic care they need to have love for today and hope for tomorrow.

The Fellowship Child Sponsorship program is a ministry of Fellowship National and is managed by Fellowship Aid and International Relief.
